ash opened the door, sticking his head into the room as he saw a sleep-deprived redd's head rested on his desk with papers scattered around him.

a sickening headache passed by him.

he plopped into the room, and more-or-so limped over to his desk as redd had presumably heard his footsteps and raised his head.

redd stared. ash stared back.

redd groaned. "ash, if i see you at my office again this week i'm going to—"

"red."

"what?"

"would you believe me if i said i was a witness to a murder?" redd choked.

he sternly stared at ash. "...ash, who."

ash stopped in his spot, almost hesitant to reveal it, almost like it was at the tip of his tongue. redd waited expectantly for an answer, while shuffling papers into coherent piles around him.

"you know.. uh.. vitalasy.."

"wh—"

"..and subz killed him."

"what do y—"

"and stabbed me."

"and y—"

"now i am sufficiently bleeding out, reddoons."

redd stopped in his seat, furrowing his eyebrows. "ash. i'm a lawyer, not a doctor."

"yeah, and i hate everyone else."

"..that— that's not— ash.. that's not how it works."

"yes it does."

"if you keep coming into my office instead of a doctor you're going to die."

"as far as i'm aware, mr.doons, i am not dead"

"barely."

"what the fuck does that mean"
